BANDITS HOLDUP COPS AND PRISONERS

NEW YORK, April 25.—Five masked gunmen held up two police detectives and 14 prisoners they had captured in a raid on a card game in Harlem apartment yesterday, and in escaping after the detectives opened fire, one of the bandits shot and mortally wounded Herbert Hayes, a negro elevator operator. He died later in a hospital.

Four detectives made the raid. After tying up their prisoners, who went out to call a patrol wagon, while the other two remained with their captives. Meanwhile the five bandits arrived in an automobile. They wore no masks when they entered the elevator, but put them on just before reaching the floor where they told the negro to let them off.

One of the bandits covered the negro with a gun and walked him down the corridor, the other four men went to the apartment and knocked. The two detectives within, thinking their brother officers had returned for the prisoners, opened the door. Pistols were thrust in their faces and the 12 men in the room were ordered to throw up their hands, and each bandit, brandishing a revolver, began to search them. As one of the robbers put his hands on Detective Ryan, the officer drew his pistol and fired. A fusillade of shots followed, but no one was wounded. In the confusion the robbers fled. The negro ran for the elevator and the bandit, who had been guarding him, opened fire, the bullet entering his stomach. The two detectives pursued the gunmen to the street, but they escaped in an automobile.
